1. General information on the time series

- Date of national metadata: 09 March 2022
- National data: http://sdg-indikatoren.de/en/10-3-1/
- Definition: The time series measures the share of population who felt discriminated in their contacts with public services in the last two years. It provides information about the relative share of the population, which reported having personally felt discriminated against or harassed, as compared to the share of the total population interviewed.
- Disaggregation: age group; education level; sex; country of citizenship; migratory status; income quintile; marital status

2. Comparison with global metadata

- Date of global metadata: December 2018
- Global metadata: https://unstats.un.org/sdgs/metadata/files/Metadata-10-03-01.pdf
- The time series is not compliant with the global metadata, but provides additional information.

3. Data description

- The data is based on a special evaluation from the Life Situation Survey, which is commissioned by the Federal Government and carried out by the Federal Statistical Office. In 2021 around 6,000 citizens and more than 2,700 business were interviewed.
  Data is only available from 2015 onwards.
